Chapter 1 by Story Wars

PROLOGUE

There once was a time, in the past, long, long ago. There was an evil scientist. He believed that there was a way to create anything he wanted. One day, he was walking by a graveyard. He walked around a bit. He looked at all the graves and saw one that had a name. A special name. It looked familiar, but he didn't know whose name it was. He saw something yellow that caught his eye stuck in the dirt. He looked closer. He saw that it was an old yellowed piece of paper. It was small. It had ingredients on it. On the top it said "secret potion". He didn't know what kind of potion it was, but he found it very interesting. He took it back to his laboratory. He found all of the ingredients that the potion said. The neighbors heard a bunch of noise coming from his little house. No one ever saw or heard of him again. But then, in the future again, about 100 years later, there was a boy named Evan. He lived right by the evil scientist's house, but he didn't know. Evan lived with his mom and dad. He also made some new friends who lived close to him. His friends would sometimes tell some stories about the evil scientist whenever they had playdates, but he did not really know lots of the details. He never knew about where the evil scientist lived, but he just knew the stories. He knew about the graveyard, but he didn't know
